

On The Pleasure of NO Longer Being Very Young

PO,

Explanation - 3

Explain, with the reference to the context, the following passage:

"It is one the artist distinct."

These lines are taken from a thought provoking essay "On The Pleasure of NO Longer Being Very young." which is written by one of the finest writers of English literature G.K. Chesterton. Through this essay the writer has tried to highlight the real sense about old aged people. How the old men realise about their personal experience. In these lines the writer says, aged people are better able to understand the significance of the modern age, which they can view detachedly, since they belong to an age gone-by. The young people live too much in the modern world; they cannot stand away from it, and get a true perspective of it. The aged people have an experience of the age they have lived through sharply outlined against this experience of an age that is no more, the significance of the opening era dawns upon their minds.
